Victim database released

Our capitol news conference gains wide coverage

FOHVAMP held a news conference at the state capitol March 19 to release our database of 1,300 victims of unsolved Colorado murders as well as a public opinion survey we sponsored that asked Colorado voters if they supported spending $3,000,000 per year to track down and prosecute the killers of our loved ones.

We made public the names, dates of death and other information about these victims because we wanted to put an identity to each of the victim numbers we had been talking about in previous press releases. We have worked more than five years to compile this data.

We received cooperation from many law enforcement agencies and Victim Assistance Law Enforcement Funds that made this accomplishment possible.

In February, we commissioned a survey of Colorado voters to learn if they supported us in our desire to find funds for a Cold Case Team at the Colorado Bureau of Investigation (CBI) to effectively address our unsolved murders. The answer was a resounding "yes!"

Newsletter readers may remember that last year the legislature passed, and Governor Ritter signed, HB 1272 which gave us the framework for such a Cold Case Team but appropriated only $67,000 so CBI could gather cold case data and compare it to ours.

We received financial support for the public opinion poll from Sheilah's Fund of the Tides Foundation. The results of this survey (shown in the column to the right) should cheer the hearts of every family member and friend of our victims.

Being able to show legislators that Colorado voters are with us should strengthen our hand as we seek this funding in the next session.

Our staff worked hard preparing the materials to be released at this press conference. The results made the effort worthwhile and gave satisfaction to each of us.

Our story appeared eighteen times on nine television stations across Colorado including Spanish language

Noticiero Univision 50, Denver. Often appearing in conjunction with stories of local unsolved murders, this news conference story made six daily newspapers and is still appearing in weekly newspapers statewide. We are grateful to the families who consented to be interviewed. Their cooperation helped make this work.

Survey asks cold case funding questions of Colorado voters

Here are the answers 500 Colorado voters gave to RBI strategies in this February FOHVAMP-sponsored poll:

Colorado voters are evenly split on best punishment for capital crimes.

Q. If you could choose between these two approaches, which do you think is the better penalty for committing murder: the death penalty or life imprisonment with absolutely no possibility of parole? A. Death Penalty: 45%; Life without Parole (LWOP): 45%

When given facts about the cost and frequency of usage, a plurality of voters opposed death penalty.

Q. Let me give you a little more information. The state now spends over $3 million every year to prosecute death penalty cases, $3 million more than it costs to prosecute non-death penalty murder cases. In the past thirty years, only one person has been executed. Given that, do you favor or oppose the State's use of the death penalty for convicted killers? A. Favor: 45% Oppose: 48%

A strong majority favor spending additional money to close murder cases.

Howard's Notes

Our Annual Meeting this year will be on October 4th. The venue is the Four Points Sheraton Hotel at I-25 and Hampden Avenue, same as the last three years. There will be workshops, a luncheon and a Forum in addition to the business meeting. Mark your calendar.

The poll of Colorado voters was conducted for us by Denver-based RBI Strategies whose staff has supervised over 200 polls, interviewing more than 75,000 Colorado voters. For our poll, RBI conducted 500 interviews with Colorado voters likely to participate in the November 2008 general election. The random sample was drawn from an updated file of registered voters. The margin of error for the sample is plus or minus 4.36%. Funds for the poll were granted by Sheilah's Fund of the Tides Foundation on the recommendation of Betsy Fairbanks, a friend of Michael Radelet's.

Fifteen new family members of victims of unsolved Colorado murders found us because of the March 19 news conference. They called and emailed us to get information about how FOHVAMP might help them.

Thanks to Cold Case Task Force members Linda Gruno, Jim & June Menger, who are reviewing information for us that we don't have time to get to. Teamwork is spreading throughout FOHVAMP.

Some of our family members and friends get breaking news about our activities and links to coverage of our stories in the media because their email addresses are in our email address book. If you would like to receive these news announcements, send your email address to hvmorton@earthlink.net. Your address will never appear on any email broadcast by us. We address you in the blind copy box.

We mailed the "Highlights" video of the 2007 Annual Meeting on DVDs to all family members and friends on February 24, 25 & 26. The editing, duplication and mailing of these discs was funded by a grant from the Victims of Crime Act (VOCA). We are now mailing the complete set of videos on DVD to each new family member we contact. If you would like to have this set of three DVDs which shows the workshops, Forum and Craig Zablocki's "Positively Humor," send an email request to hvmorton@earthlink.net.

If you live in Northern Colorado and can volunteer a few Friday evenings, we need help for our Bingo game which delivers much needed funds for projects that are outside of our grant funding. Please call Jerri Reichert, our Bingo Manager, and volunteer. 970-351-6088.

Survey of voters on Cold Case Funding

Q. In the past thirty years, there have been 1,250 murders in Colorado that are still (unsolved). Would you favor or oppose the State of Colorado spending an added $3 million per year in taxpayer money to track down and prosecute the killers in these unsolved murders? A. Favor: 70% Oppose 20%

Informed voters strongly favor replacing the death penalty with life imprisonment and using the money to prosecute killers in open murder cases.

Q. Given what you know now about the cost of the death penalty and the number of unsolved murders in Colorado, would you favor or oppose replacing the death penalty with life imprisonment with no possibility of parole, and using the money saved to track down and prosecute the killers in unsolved murder cases?

A. Favor: 63% Oppose: 27%

A majority of voters in every tested demographic category (age, gender, income, party affiliation and education,) opted to spend the money on cold cases at the expense of spending money on the death penalty. But voters were unwilling to cut funds from current budgets to solve open murder cases.

Q. Let's leave the death penalty out of this. Would you favor or oppose legislation that directed law enforcement agencies to cut $3 million per year out of their current budget and dedicate that money to track down and prosecute the killers in unsolved murder cases?

A. Favor: 39% Oppose: 48%

Conclusions: Colorado voters are evenly split between the death penalty and life without parole as the proper punishment for capital crimes; when made aware of the number of unsolved murders, voters strongly favor dedicating $3 million per year in tax money to solve these crimes; a large majority of voters favor replacing the death penalty with life imprisonment in order to fund solving open cases. But voters were not in favor of cutting current law enforcement operating budgets.
